DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1 and 3 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Park (6384749).

Regarding claim 1, Park discloses an apparatus that relates to a digital video coding method (Park: column 1, lines 6-8). This apparatus comprises "estimating contents of the stream header from contents of the units" (Park: column 4, lines 50-55, wherein the units are the GFID fields, the stream header is the picture header), "generating estimated stream-header information" (Park: column 4, lines 50-55, wherein the estimation generates the information), and "decoding the units according to the estimated stream header information" (Park: column 4, lines 50-55, wherein decoding is performed based on the estimated values). Although Park fails to disclose decoding the units using the estimated information before the stream header is received, Park does disclose using the estimated information when the header is lost. The examiner notes that since the header is lost, the decoding is subsequently performed before the header is received using the estimated information. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to implement the decoding before the header is received in order to obtain an apparatus that operates more efficiently by being able to start the decoding process at an earlier time.

Regarding claim 3, Park discloses "checking the decoding units for errors" (Park: column 8, lines 26-41, wherein the checking is the comparison of the GFID values) and "modifying the estimated stream-header information when a decoding error is found" (Park: column 8, lines 26-41, wherein the decoding error is the determination that the current frame's GFID value is different from the next frames GFID value, the modifying is outputting the current picture header indication signal).

3. Claim 4 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Park (6384749) in view of Khayrallah et al. (5745502), (hereinafter referred to as "Khayrallah").

Regarding claim 4, note the examiners rejection for claim 1, and in addition, claim 4 differs from claim 1 in that claim 4 further requires decoding a single unit repeatedly if a decoding error is found and modifying the header each time. Khayrallah teaches that prior art error checking schemes fully optimize channel throughput and efficiency (Khayrallah: column 1, lines 60-63). To help alleviate this problem Khayrallah discloses "decoding a single unit repeatedly if an error is found and modifying the header each time a unit is decoded" (Khayrallah: figures 3A-3B and 7A-7B, column 7, lines 5-39, wherein the repeatability is the storing of the packets in the buffer until there is no error, the modification of the header occurs when the packet pairs are switched thus changing the content of the packet and subsequently the header). Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to take the apparatus disclosed by Park and add the error correction taught by Khayrallah in order to obtain an apparatus that operates more efficiently by correcting errors before packets are transmitted/displayed.

Allowable Subject Matter

4. Claim 2 is objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Conclusion

5. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure:
